South East Ireland

South East Ireland

The south East of Ireland has plenty of historical places of interest as well as some beautiful scenery and dramatic coastlines to discover. Whether you choose a coastal or inland route you will never be short of a reason to take a break from driving.

On the coast of County Wexford is the wildlife sanctuary of the Saltee Islands. A haven for nesting birds including Puffins, Gannets and Manx Shearwaters. It also has a population of Grey Seals and traces of habitation left by everyone from Neolithic man to 18th century smugglers. Lying 5km off the coast of Kilmore Quay, it's only a short boat journey to reach this idyllic spot.

Inland around Kilkenny you could visit Kilkenny Castle. A striking building that reflects the many architectural styles that have come in and out of fashion since the building began 8 centuries ago. If the kids need to stretch their legs take them to Castlecomer Discovery Park where they have everything from craft workshops to tree top adventure courses set in 80 acres of woodland and lakes, there's enough to keep them entertained for the day.

If you continue along the coast towards Cork, you will find Ireland's oldest city Waterford. While you are there visit the House of Waterford Crystal where you can take a guided tour around the factory, learn the many facets of traditional crystal production and pick up a souvenir.

To the west of Waterford are both the Comeragh and Monavullagh Mountains, both offer striking scenery and plenty of opportunity for the outdoor enthusiast.

Places to visit

Powerscourt House and Gardens

At over a mile long and planted with over 2,000 beech trees, the driveway at Powerscourt House gives you an indication of the magnificence of the whole estate. 47 acres of gardens and a recently renovated House have turned it into an exceptional tourist destination. After admiring the Georgian ballroom enjoy Avoca home wares and food from their acclaimed cookbook in the Terrace cafe.

Address: Enniskerry, Co Wicklow

Hook Head Lighthouse.

The oldest working lighthouse in northern Europe and as legend goes, started by pyromaniac monks in the sixth century. What you see now is an 800 year old Norman structure and at the top of the 115 steps, a fine view.

Address: Hook Head, Wexford, Ireland

Cahir Castle

One of Ireland's largest and best preserved castles, incredibly it has retained its keep, tower and much of its defensive structure. Informative audio/visual show available.

Address: Castle Street, Cahir, County Tipperary.
