

Stonehenge cuts an imposing profile in the stark landscape of Salisbury Plain and recently benefitted from a redevelopment of the area and a new information centre. It stands in an area renowned for its prehistoric ruins and burial grounds and Stonehenge itself dates back to 3000BC. To the north is Avebury Henge, a monument comprising three circles of standing stones around the village of Avebury, also under UNESCO protection.

Whilst in the area why not use the opportunity to visit West Kennet Long Barrow and Silbury Hill, two monuments which pre date the henge by several centuries. To the west is Laycock, a village that is owned almost in its entirety by the National Trust. The village buildings here can date back to the 15th Century, the location has been used in several films, most notably two of the Harry Potter series. On the edge of the village is Laycock Abbey founded in 1229 by the Countess of Salisbury as a nunnery and is now home to the Fox Talbot Museum.
